

Appendix 1

TERMS OF USE

1. The Centre for Systems Solutions (CRS) games/simulations:
 - can be used free ONLY for non-commercial purposes*,
 - cannot be disseminated (distributed) via other websites or other means,
 - cannot be modified without permission from the Centre for Systems Solutions.
2. For commercial use, please contact us (office@systemssolutions.org) for current conditions.
3. The code of conduct in the media release before, during and after an event with CRS games/simulations should ensure that all parties involved are accordingly mentioned. In most cases, it will be: The Company (the organiser-coordinator) and CRS (trainers, moderators and game/simulation's author).

In addition, the following points apply when purchasing a game/simulation:

1. Each time the game/simulation is used, CRS should be provided (via email at office@systemssolutions.org) with information when, where, and with what target group (e.g. students, researchers) it was played. For more uses in a month, a monthly report is sufficient.
2. After the game/simulation has been used, players should be asked to fill in anonymous surveys provided by CRS that should be sent to CRS, insofar as it is possible.

DEFINITIONS

* Non-commercial purposes, as a general rule, include all activities carried out by NGOs and public universities. In case of activities generating revenue, the revenue should not exceed the expenses incurred.

 Commercial purposes include all activities carried out by businesses and private universities (as well as profit-generating activities carried by NGOs and public universities).
